SUICIDE-REORGANIZATION OF THE WARD CLUBS-A PRIMARY ELECTION PROPABLE-DIVISION IN THE CONSERVATIVE RANKS-CASES SENT ON FOR TRIAL, &C. [Correspondence of the Richmond Dispatch,] MARCH 20, 1878. This morning about 9 o'cleck the dead body of a white man, a stranger, was found in the Appomattox river near the Pocahontas shore. The body was lying in shallow water, the receding tide baving almost left it exposed. It was discovered by a dog which the owner was enticing into the water by throwing out sticks for him to bring back, and the animal, catching hold of the clothing of the body, discovered it to the man, who brought the fact to the knowledge of the authorities. At an inquest subsequently held it was ascertained by papers found on the person of the deceased that his name was Thomas Landey. He was about forty-five or fifty years of age. well clad, of intelligent appearance, and evidently an Englishman, but a tramp by profession. Night before last he obtained accommodations at the jail. All day vesterday he was wandering about, and spent some hours in Blandford cemetery. It is believed that his death was the hat and coat and satchel were left on the bank, and he was drowned in water, when the tide is full, scarcely deep enough to ing. The drowning must have occured late in the night, as the face presented a very natural appearance.

The attendance at the ward meetings last night was generally very small. The Conwards, and a new executive committee elected. The reorganization was rendered necessary by the resignation of all the old officers of the clubs, it being generally understood that the people desired reorganization. [Correspondence of the Richmond Dispatch.] MARCH 19, 1878. Captain Abner Anderson, of the Register, has moved his office and printing-room from the building which he had occupied time out of mind, considering he is so young a man, and has found good quarters in the rooms over the store of Mr. W.
